

2020 BLOG PLANNER

Personal Note From Lynette

Hello friend! Thank you so much for downloading this planner. I know there are tons of other resources and free blog planners out there you could have chosen and you chose this. My team, and family appreciate you.

Your act of downloading this planner itself tells me a lot. It says you are serious and intentional about your goals. Kudos to you! I pray this planner will not just put you on the right path, but help you maintain it throughout 2020.

If you are not new to the planner, you will notice some changes. The first thing you might notice is a year at a glance calendar. I hope this will allow you to plan ahead.

We've also simplified the planner, making it less busy and freeing up some blank space on the side for short notes. Overall, it's cleaner but also hits the key areas that we all should work on to keep our blog business growing and earning.

If you are new to the planner, here are a few pointers how to use the weekly pages.

- The goal is to work on your content daily. They don't have to be published daily unless you want to, but keep writing or building your content daily. Keep in mind, your content doesn't have to be text. It can be video, audio, images. These should go in your Posts column.
- The Emails column is where you plan emails to write to your list. If you do not have a list, I highly recommend you start now. Today.
- The same concept goes for the Social column. Plan your social media posts here. Try to achieve some kind of synergy topic-wise for all three. For example, if I want to write a post about making brownies in my Instant Pot, I would put that in my posts column. Under emails, I would make sure to bring their attention to that post and perhaps throw in related links/products. In the social column, I would put something like create Pinterest image and pin it.
- Use the observances of the day and the holidays of the month to help you come up with topics.

I look forward to growing with you.

Lynette Chandler

The background of the image is an abstract, painterly composition of swirling colors. It features a palette of various shades of green, from light lime to deep forest green, intermingled with warm yellow and olive tones. The brushstrokes are visible, creating a sense of movement and depth. Centered over this background is the text "Let's Do This" in a white, hand-drawn script font. The letters have a slightly distressed or chalky texture, with some internal shading and irregular edges that give it a personal, artistic feel.
